Seth is a sneaky mathematician. He is a junior who has accelerated himself into AP Calculus. He is calm, confident, and quick. Most of the time, he chooses to share his understanding with small groups of his peers who then echo his (as well as their own) comprehension. He is not simply teaching others; He is teaching himself. His confidence is also displayed in his thorough written work and illustrated in his mastery of the calculus notation handed down to us from the masters. Seth has shown himself to be fluent in the language and syntax of our most universal language. I am looking forward to his continued success with mathematics and am hopeful that I might even get to be a part of his grand adventure.
